HOW LONG FOR HITLER?

The blood purge continues in Germany. The word coming out is that scores upon scores of high-ranking German army officers have been put to death. There are reports of revolts here and there. They say Adolf Hitler holds the upper hand. "Another report is that Der Fuehrer has barricaded himself in a new hideout."

It is pure speculation—all of it. It is the most serious thing that has yet happened to Hitler. No longer is there a solid front in Germany. The political scene there seems to be every bit as black as the military picture.

The country seems to be bursting at the seams. Can Hitler win this fight? Temporarily, he may be able to hold his power, but it can only be for a fleeting moment. He may slaughter as many generals as he wants to, yet the German army remains what it has always been—the real master of the nation in the last showdown.

But is this the last showdown? No one here can tell that at this moment. The Gestapo under Himmler is very strong. It is really a powerful internal army, at least 600,000 strong and as well armed as any army that size. An army of 600,000 holding the nerve centers of a nation obviously can retain power for some time.

But in the last analysis real control rests in the German high command. For one thing, only the generals in the field can surrender armies. And, for a second, it is the generals who can turn the machine guns and the artillery on their own enemies within.

The question is whether the high command has reached that point. But regardless of whether they stay in line, Hitler should know by now that he is a doomed man. If not this month, next month. And if not next month, the month after.

WELLES' BOOK

In his book, just off the press, Summer Welles, former under-secretary of state, has "put his foot in it" about Spain and the policy of Washington toward Franco. Welles declares flatly that "Of all our blind isolationist policies, the most disastrous was our attitude toward the Spanish civil war."

It is his opinion that the United States should have given aid to the Spanish republic in its fight against Franco, instead of declaring strict neutrality. That Welles' book is not as factual as might be supposed is made plain when he says that President Roosevelt was out of Washington when this policy was adopted and did not approve it. Roosevelt was in Washington and approved the policy. Had he not approved the policy would have been reversed.

As Welles is wrong in this instance, it is a fair assumption that many of his other utterances in the 414-page treatise on the State Department are subject to questioning. Welles' book may figure in the campaign, but it has got off to a bad start in the Spanish matter.

If somebody can find a spot in Europe that hasn't been bombed, it will be news.

DEPRESSIONS AND THE CONSTITUTION

owned homes or farms, those who operated even the smallest businesses, those who had savings or investments—and of course all who worked for such property owners.

The most violent flareup of the time, the one which was perhaps the last straw in making revision of the government inescapable, was Shays' Rebellion. This was not a revolt of the rich and prosperous—it was a flareup in 1789 among poor farmers in Western Massachusetts. It lasted for months, and threatened to reach the proportions of a Civil War.

The Constitutional Convention was summoned the next year because it became obvious that all Americans, rich and poor, stood between two dangers. On the one side was open anarchy, and on the other the growing threat that the government would be seized by a privileged few and turned into an autocracy.

How well the Constitution met the dangers has been established by a century and a half of expansion and growth.

ATTENTION!
ALL HOME CANNERS!

If we all pitch in, 1944 will see the greatest food production in our history.

But that will require your help.

It's up to you to: 1. grow every ounce of food you possibly can; 2. use all the food you grow; 3. can your food by the proper and safe methods.

Every ounce of home-canned food is urgently needed. Your Government begs you not only to match what you did last year but, if possible, to better your 1943 record.

Put up fruits and tomatoes by the boiling-water bath method—a safe and satisfactory method for these foods.

But before you begin your 1944 canning of all other vegetables, Good Housekeeping wants to tell you how to avoid a danger that may occur in home-canned food—a danger recognized by many authorities, including the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

That danger is botulinus food poisoning!

Botulinus poisoning comes from bacteria that live in the soil and cling to vegetables. It is rare—but it isn't confined to just a few parts of the country, as some people think.

Botulinus germs may be on the food you can. They must be destroyed. Whenever these bacteria are present in the food and are not destroyed during the canning process, they gradually produce a toxin which is poisonous.

It takes hotter-than-boiling heat to kill botulinus germs. Neither hot-water bath nor open-kettle canning provides enough heat to destroy them. That is why we advise: the only safe way to can low-acid vegetables—which means all vegetables except tomatoes—is by the correct use of a pressure cooker!

If you don't already own a pressure cooker, you'll be glad to know that the Government is allowing the manufacture of 400,000 new cookers for sale this summer, without priorities.

If you can't buy a pressure cooker, borrow your neighbor's . . . or perhaps you'll find one available through a community canning group. If not, form your own community group, and buy one. To be safe, don't can low-acid vegetables any other way.

We take this opportunity to issue two further warnings: 1. Oven canning is dangerous. It has caused many serious accidents to persons and to property. Shun it! 2. All home-canned foods should be examined carefully when opened. If there is evidence of spoilage, the food should not be used. NEVER TASTE to discover spoilage.

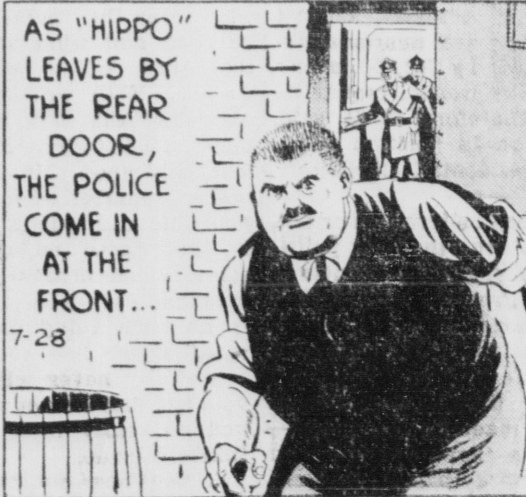

By all means, put up every ounce of surplus food you possibly can. Our armed forces and the hungry nations of the earth need the benefits of our abundance.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

THE SIZE of the women's vote has nothing to do with it. Women got the vote in 1920 and they were completely entitled to it. There never was a sound argument as to their right to vote. The real argument was as to what they would do with the vote after they got it. In the days when the suffrage campaign was being waged, it was contended that if the women were given the vote they would purify politics, lift the politician to a higher plane and raise the standards of public life not only in the national Government but particularly in State and city administration.

IN THE 24 years since women began to vote (and in every one of those years the number who registered and voted has increased), not one of those things has happened. On the contrary it has been very firmly established that women do not vote as a sex or a class or group. In these 24 years, the League of Women Voters, which is the soundest and best of women's political organizations, has done a great deal to interest and educate women along political lines and to inspire their active interest and participation in politics. Nevertheless, it still remains true that the great bulk of women (and this includes those of the highest intelligence as well as the lowest) vote the way the male heads of their families do. If they have no husbands, they are influenced by uncles, or brothers, or lovers. Of course, there are many exceptions to this rule, but none the less it is the rule.

AND, IT is entirely natural. It does not argue any inability of women voters to think for themselves. It does not mean they are less intelligent or understanding than men. It is partly due to the instinctive tendency of the female to rely upon the male and partly to the habit of women, for generations, to regard politics and public affairs as the exclusive business of men. It will take a good many years still before they fully can overcome the instinct or break themselves of the habit. Maybe they never will.

AT ANY rate, though they are now in the clear majority and are holding more offices and getting a greater play from the politicians than before, they have not swung any elections yet. Nor will they swing this one. They will vote in this election as they voted before—to wit, largely as the men vote.

No better illustration of this habit is to be found than in the Negro vote. When, in 1936, that vote was captured by Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt, the Negro woman went over with the Negro man. In that election and in 1940 they were for Mr. Roosevelt with equal solidity. If in this election, as seems indicated, that solidity is lessened, the proportion of loss between the male and female Negroes will be practically the same.

THERE JUST is no woman vote. Not even on the so-called moral questions do women vote one way and men the other. There has not yet been found an issue upon which the sexes divide. After 24 years it is still correct to say that giving the women the vote has doubled the size of the electorate, more than doubled the cost of campaigns and elections, and greatly added to the bewilderment and confusion. But, it hasn't changed anything else. That, however, is not the fault of women and in no way detracts from the fact that there was no sound reason for withholding the vote from them.

Wood Carving Is A Hobby of W. Stewart

The local worker has numerous talents. In addition to his job of maintenance foreman at Rohm and Haas plant, he is a trained architect, he having a degree from Drexel Institute, Philadelphia.

It was during a tour of Europe after his eyesight began to fail, that he studied woodcarving.

Among his works are reproductions to minute scale of schooners, yachts, etc., for the ship owners, these being in bas relief and used as wall plaques.

Mr. Stewart and his wife have travelled considerably. While in England some years ago Mr. Stewart studied the art of heraldry, which made a background for his preparation of coats of arms. Through this knowledge he traces family histories and creates coats of arms.

The Stewarts have published a number of children's books, Mrs. Stewart being the writer of the family, and her husband illustrating the stories. Mr. Stewart was for some time connected with a Philadelphia newspaper, doing editorial and general cartooning.

or none in others. Some 2,500 Nazis were slain in the Bialystok region, while approximately 1,000 were taken prisoner at Lwow.

Strategically, perhaps, the most significant Soviet success was the capture of Siauliai, which is only 85 miles east of the Baltic seaport of Memel and 73 miles southwest of the Latvian capital of Riga. Only one major railroad escape route is left for an estimated 500,000 German troops in the Baltic states.

In Poland, the only remaining big base before Warsaw still in German hands is Brest-Litovsk, some 110 miles due east of the Polish capital, and that historic city is virtually encircled and doomed.

The other enemy strongholds did not fall without some savage and bloody fighting which cost Russian as well as German lives.

Gen. Andrei I. Yeremenko's forces, which occupied Daugavpils and Rezekne, had to battle their way through trenches, anti-tank ditches, "dragon's teeth" defenses and barbed wire entanglements surrounding Daugavpils, routing three German infantry divisions, two S. S. regiments and a police regiment.

Soviet tanks and infantry swept beyond the city to sever the Daugavpils-Riga railway and reached the western Dvina river.

On the first Baltic front, Gen. Ivan C. Bagration's troops advanced 43 miles to cut the Siauliai-Riga railway and highway and all roads to Tilsit, East Prussia. Russian infantrymen, moving forward behind mobile formations, annihilated the German garrisons in the large inhabited localities of Radzivilskis, Sapiegi and Kaite. They broke into Siauliai itself from three sides, wiped out some 2,000 Nazis and captured large quantities of supplies and equipment. More than 400 enemy troops were taken prisoners.

Gen. M. V. Zakharov's Second White Russian Army was forced to overcome the Nazi defenders of Bialystok, some 100 miles northeast of Warsaw, in fierce street fighting as the enemy threw in strong tank and infantry forces in a desperate effort to save the city.

Remnants of the routed Nazi forces retreated over the Suprasl and Narva Rivers, where they were mercilessly bombed by Russian planes. Approximately 2,500 Germans were slain in the Bialystok debacle and Russian troops seized many tanks, guns, motor vehicles, locomotives and railway cars, as well as large stores of ammunition, provisions and military goods.

Marshal Ivan S. Konev's first Ukrainian Army completed the liquidation of Nazi forces that had garrisoned the encircled southeastern Polish rail junction city of Lwow. In one sector alone they burned or disabled 40 enemy tanks, captured 70 guns and took more than 1,000 prisoners.

In the Carpathian foothills, the southern wing of Konev's army surrounded the oil city of Stanislawow, described by Marshal Stalin as a regional center of the Ukraine and a "large railroad junction and important strong point of the German defenses. Russian columns entered the city from the northeast after cutting the last escape highway.

Other Russian forces driving toward Warsaw were reported fighting in the streets of Siedlce, 50 miles southeast of the embattled Polish capital.

On Wednesday, the Soviet com-

muniqué disclosed, 131 German tanks were destroyed and 42 planes shot down.

Americans Continue Major Attacks

London—The American First Army is continuing major attacks on both sides of St. Lo, the German High Command said today. A high command communique admitted that the German lines below St. Lo had been withdrawn.

"While they (the Americans) only achieved unimportant breakthroughs east of St. Lo," the communique said, "our troops were withdrawn farther to the south and southwest of the town in fierce fighting which caused heavy losses on both sides."

"Counterattacks to close the gaps in our front line at several points are going on. Seventy-five tanks were destroyed. In the Caen sector, the enemy only carried out unsuccessful attacks of small significance."

Almighty God, Thou art always thinking of us; all things are for our sake. Thy providence shows us that Thou dost love us. Thy redemption shows us how much Thou dost love us. May we love Thee with our whole being. May the Cross be the symbol not only of our objective faith but also the symbol of our Christian experience. We come to the Cross of Christ because it leads us to Thee and Thou art our goal this day and for evermore. Lead on, O Christ of God, and we will follow Thee. We pray in Jesus' Name. Amen.

MOTHERS: THE FLETCHER'S CASTORIA NOW ON SALE IS SAFEGUARDED THREE WAYS!

Look for the Serial Control Number on each bottle

EVERY BOTTLE of Fletcher's Castoria—now on sale at your drug-gist's—bears a Serial Control Number.

This number is plainly visible through a "window" in the new package. It is your guarantee that Fletcher's Castoria is safeguarded by three different kinds of rigid tests... chemical, bacteriological, and biological.

Here's how you can easily identify the new package:

The Green Band... Around each package is a brilliant green band. This band quickly identifies the triple-tested Fletcher's Castoria now on sale.

The Serial Control Number... The Serial Control Number is on the bottle label. You can see it through a "window" in the outside carton.

We think that this visible evidence of quality and reliability... the Serial

Control Number on each bottle... will be welcomed by millions of mothers who have long used Fletcher's Castoria as the ideal laxative for children.

And we think that millions of mothers will be glad to know that Fletcher's Castoria—the laxative made especially for children—is now on sale at their druggists.

For this is the original and genuine Fletcher's Castoria... the laxative that's mild and gentle, yet effective... the laxative that's pleasant-tasting, so you don't have to "force" your child to take it.

Ask for Fletcher's Castoria the next time your child needs a laxative.

Note: Until sufficient stocks can be made available, your druggist may not have enough Fletcher's Castoria on hand to meet all demands. If he happens to be out of stock when you ask for Fletcher's Castoria, please be patient. He will have it for you shortly.

VOLTZ NINE GOES INTO 1ST PLACE OF SUBURBAN CIRCUIT

Gasoleers Defeat Diamond Boys by Score of 7 to 5

BLACK ON THE MOUND

Veteran Pitcher Was Able To Breeze Speed Ball Past The Diamond Batters

EDGELEY, July 28.—The Voltz-Texaco team went into first place in the Bristol Suburban League last evening as it beat the Diamond nine, 5-2, on the Edgely field.

The Diamond boys outthrew the winners, 7-5, but in the pinches the veteran Howard Black breezed his speed ball past the Diamond batters. Nine of the Diamond players went down on strikes and two received passes.

Of the seven hits made by the Diamond team, four were doubles with "Eddie" DeKoy having a pair and Woolvin and Keyes getting the others.

SPORTSMEN'S BRIEFS

BY JOE ELBERSON

Season ends . . . the trout season in the Commonwealth ends on Monday, July 31st. From all reports the season generally hasn't been too good. Bucks County's three streams, however, did produce some nice trout. Some anglers think the Commission should open the season again in September, as is the case in New Jersey. Perhaps this plan would prove a good one.

Among tomorrow's anglers fishing nearby streams these days is an enthusiastic Third Ward boy, William Terneson, Linden street. I have met Bill many times both at the Canal and Silver Lake. He is always busy fishing. He really enjoys this healthful outdoor sport, and he is quite an expert in manipulating his fly rod.

Post war planning . . . you hear and read a great deal about this particular theme these days. It is important. And now is the time to lay the plans for our post-war world.

Our County Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs is concerned with this post-war program. A committee will be appointed very shortly to study ways and means of improving hunting and fishing facilities in the County.

Here is a program which should vitally concern every hunter and every angler . . . all those who love the great out-of-doors. And since it does concern each one of us we should think about it and turn over in our minds every possibility for improved hunting and fishing in this section.

Your opinions, your plans, your thoughts towards improvement, should be jotted down and presented at the proper time to the Federation Committee. Mail them to me and they will be forwarded to the proper persons.

Experiment . . . the Fish & Wildlife Service, with headquarters in Washington, D. C., is reported ready to try out a new fishing device. It is a radar instrument which is said to be able to find fish, tell their size, and indicate in which direction they are traveling. If a pocket-size model is produced after the war I'll be tempted to buy one of them!

Unsafe firearms . . . in the July issue of the Pennsylvania Game News, W. C. Shaffer, Chief, Division of Law Enforcement, of the Pennsylvania Game Commission, calls attention to the fact that a number of old shotguns and rifles, which are unsafe and unfit for shooting purposes, are being offered for sale privately by individuals. Many of the shotguns are made with Damascus barrels which were not manufactured for present day high speed ammunition. The same is similarly true of a number of rifles with interchangeable ammunition.

Mr. Shaffer says these firearms are likely to explode and cause serious injury to the user or nearby persons and suggests that prospective purchasers be extremely careful before purchasing this class of firearms.

FORMER U. OF PENN. PITCHER HOLDS THE ARROWS TO 5 HITS

Eastern Aircraft Defeats Arrows by Score of 13 to 0

EVERY HIT A SINGLE

De Risi Went to Pieces in Fifth and Trenton Nine Went on Scoring Spree

TRENTON, July 28.—"Ed" Warwick, formerly of Penn University, held the Fleetwings team to five hits last evening on Wetzel field, as he pitched the Eastern Aircraft nine to a 13-0 triumph over the Wingers.

Warwick's fast ball was too much for the Fleetwings batters as he set them down lining after lining. The five hits made by the losers were all singles and Holcomb had two out of four to lead the batters.

"Mike" DeRisi started on the mound for the Arrows and pitched brilliant ball for four innings during which stretch he held the Eastern Aircraft team hitless and had allowed but one batter to reach first on a walk. But Fleetwings and DeRisi went to pieces in the fifth when an error by Walker started the Eastern team on a scoring spree and before the frame was over eight runs had crossed.

Heiser relieved DeRisi and finished although the Trenton boys added two more with a walk, an error, and two hits in the sixth and finished with another in the seventh.

escape route, drove to within five miles of the city on both the north and the south.

(The German radio announced that the fighting in Normandy had risen to new heights and declared that Allied commanders now had concentrated 3,000 to 4,000 tanks for the coming clash on the St. Lo-Coutanges road.")

"In the western sector Allied forces have maintained their rapid advances," Communiqué No. 105 from headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower said concerning the American drive.

The twin offensive southwest-

ward from the St. Lo area was accompanied by forward advances all along the American-held front from Lessay, on the western sea coast, to the vicinity of Caumont, at the center of the Anglo-American battle line.

While one formation advanced south of occupied Periers, other units gained ground west of Caumont.

Lessay, on the coast, was taken almost simultaneously with the occupation of Periers. Both points and the towns surrounding them and in between were heavily mined and numerous booby traps had been placed in the area by the Germans who began to withdraw to the south in an effort to escape being trapped in the coastal area.

RED ARMY LEGIONS THUNDER FORWARD IN POLAND AND BALTIC STATES AFTER BIGGEST DAY OF THE PRESENT WAR

Six Major German Strongholds Captured in Sensational Advance—More Than 1600 Towns and Villages Freed From Nazi Clutches—Meet Some Resistance

By Natalia Rene
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

MOSCOW, July 28.—(INS)—Red Army legions thundered forward today in Poland and the Baltic states following their biggest day of the war, in which they captured six major German strongholds in sensational advances along a flaming front stretching from the Baltic Sea to the Carpathian foothills.

(Reuters) reported that Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's First White Russian Army is advancing beyond points 30 miles southeast of the Polish capital of Warsaw, while Marshal Ivan S. Konev's First Ukrainian Army has plunged beyond Lwow to within 12 miles of Przemyśl.

Moscow's big guns were kept busy last night booming out five salutes of 20 salvos each in honor of the liberation of the Polish cities of Lwow, Bialystok and Stanislawow, the Latvian cities of Daugavpils (Dvinsk) and Rzekelne and the Lithuania rail junction town of Siauliai (Shavili).

All told, the Russians freed more than 1,600 towns and villages from the clutches of the Nazis in yesterday's fighting, meeting stubborn opposition in some areas and little

DEPRESSIONS AND THE CONSTITUTION

(Doylestown Intelligencer, July 27)

One of the most ridiculous lines of political sales talk which the American people have ever been handed is the subtle argument so often heard, that the Constitution of the United States may be all right for periods of normal economic conditions, but that it is quite inadequate for depressions.

The true fact is that the Constitution was drafted to meet a collapsing economy, a depression, which for those who lived through it was even more terrifying than the depression of this generation, and which could have had even more disastrous consequences to the infant nation.

Personal liberty was much less the issue than economic instability. The country was in a mess which the Constitution was created to meet; a desperate financial situation involving both the nation itself and all its people, rich and poor. It did meet that situation; met it with a success that surpassed the wildest hopes of the most enthusiastic delegate.

The Revolution itself had upset the farming, manufacturing and commercial activities of the country, and had cost a good many people a great deal of money. The patriotic citizens of the day, however, would have been cheerful enough about the sacrifices if they could have found conditions improved after the war. But the new government was a failure from the start.

The national debt was small, by comparison with ours of today, but was large enough to alarm the citizens of that generation. It was not being repaid. It was growing, and the government was not even keeping up the interest.

Paper money was being issued wholesale by the nation and by the States as well. The result was that paper dollars were worth only a few cents. Thomas Jefferson tells of paying a physician $3,000 for two visits, and $355.50 for three bottles of brandy.

Of course normal commercial relations were impossible with currency so debased and government credit so shaky. Laws to compel acceptance of the paper money were a failure—merchants simply shut their shop doors.

In addition, a series of tumultuous trade wars between the states, with tonnage, tariff and other duties at every border, and retaliations and recriminations on every side, were crippling farm and manufacturing markets and commerce in general.

Sometimes it is contended that the only sufferers were the wealthy—the large manufacturers, merchants and shipowners. This is far from true. Everyone who owned property of any kind was affected; those who

TWO GROUPS ARE SLATED TO LEAVE HERE AUGUST 7TH

One Will Be Inducted Into Service and Other Will Be Pre-Induction Group

QUOTAS WILL BE LOW

Other Areas in Bucks County Also to Send Groups Into Service

Bucks County selective service quota for August will be among the lowest since war was declared, it is stated today.

The four Selective Service Boards—Bristol, Newtown, Doylestown and Quakertown, do not expect very large contingents to be called from now on.

The next contingent from Board No. 1, Bristol, will leave for pre-induction on August 7 and an induction contingent from this area is scheduled to leave the same day.

August 8 is the next pre-induction date for the Board No. 3 area (Doylestown), and there will be a group leaving on August 7 for induction.

The new induction center for Doylestown and Quakertown will be Philadelphia, since the Allentown induction center will close July 31st.

Board chairman said the reduced call is due primarily to the fact that the armed forces have reached their full strength. Future needs, it was pointed out, are only for replacements.

Draft Board No. 4 (Quakertown) has a contingent for pre-induction scheduled for August 8.

Humidity Soars To 93%; Temperature is High

With a jump of 16 per cent in the relative humidity from the 24 hour period ending at eight yesterday morning to the 24 hour period ending this morning at eight, residents of this area know why they are "sweating."

This, coupled with the fact that the temperature reached 91 degrees during the past 24 hours made conditions almost unbearable to many.

The highest percentage of humidity this week had been 80 until the past 24 hours when it soared to 93 per cent.

A sudden shower yesterday afternoon dampened the ground, the fall being 19 inches.

The temperature which registered 72 at Rohm & Haas weather observatory at eight o'clock this morning, made a rapid rise during the morning hours.

TONSIL CASES

Tonsil operations were performed in Harriman Hospital yesterday upon: Mary Lorraine Cook, Pine street; Bernard Carlen, Second avenue; and Richard Hume, Morrisville.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

The Women Vote

FRANK R. KENT

A GREAT deal has been written recently about the women's vote in this campaign. It is pointed out that for the first time the potential women voters outnumber the men voters.

Actually, there are approximately 600,000 more women registered than men. Therefore, it is said, women are now in position really to swing a Presidential election.

Whether they believe this or not, it is certainly true that the politicians in both parties are pushing women to the front at both the national headquarters and in their national conventions more conspicuously than before. One of the main speeches for the Republicans at Chicago was made by a woman—and there were more than 200 women delegates. At the Democratic convention there were speeches by two women—both proteges of Mrs. Roosevelt—and the claim was that 300 of the 1,100 delegates were women. And both conventions adopted the Equal Rights for Women amendment plank.

UNDER THESE conditions it is natural enough that there should be considerable speculation as to what will affect the "women's vote," which way the "women's vote" will be cast, and what are the issues this time which will sway the women. With women voters now exceeding the men by so wide a margin, it is easy to dilate long and learnedly upon this subject and to make a number of interesting and plausible deductions. The trouble is that those engaged in these speculations nearly all appear to ignore the big basic fact that there is no such thing as a "women's vote," never has been and in all probability never will be. Women vote but they do not vote as women and no really informed politician thinks they do.

HOW LONG FOR HITLER?

The blood purge continues in Germany. The word coming out is that scores upon scores of high-ranking German army officers have been put to death. There are reports of revolts here and there. They say Adolf Hitler holds the upper hand. Another report is that Der Fuehrer has barricaded himself in a new hideout.

It is pure speculation—all of it. It is the most serious thing that has yet happened to Hitler. No longer is there a solid front in Germany. The political scene there seems to be every bit as black as the military picture.

The country seems to be bursting at the seams. Can Hitler win this fight? Temporarily, he may be able to hold his power, but it can only be for a fleeting moment. He may slaughter as many generals as he wants to, yet the German army remains what it has always been—the real master of the nation in the last showdown.

But is this the last showdown? No one here can tell that at this moment. The Gestapo under Himmler is very strong. It is really a powerful infernal army, at least 600,000 strong and as well armed as any army that size. An army of 600,000 holding the nerve centers of a nation obviously can retain power for some time.

But in the last analysis real control rests in the German high command. For one thing, only the generals in the field can surrender armies. And, for a second, it is the generals who can turn the machine guns and the artillery on their own enemies within.

The question is whether the high command has reached that point. But regardless of whether they stay in line, Hitler should know by now that he is a doomed man. If not this month, next month. And if not next month, the month after.

WELLES' BOOK

In his book, just off the press, Sumner Welles, former under-secretary of state, has "put his foot in it" about Spain and the policy of Washington toward Franco. Welles declares flatly that "Of all our blind isolationist policies, the most disastrous was our attitude toward the Spanish civil war."

It is his opinion that the United States should have given aid to the Spanish republic in its fight against Franco, instead of declaring strict neutrality. That Welles' book is not as factual as might be supposed is made plain when he says that President Roosevelt was out of Washington when this policy was adopted and did not approve it. Roosevelt was in Washington and approved the policy. Had he not approved the policy would have been reversed.

As Welles is wrong in this instance, it is a fair assumption that many of his other utterances in the campaign, but it has got off to a bad start in the Spanish matter.

If somebody can find a spot in Europe that hasn't been bombed, it will be news.

ATTENTION!

ALL HOME CANNERS!

If we all pitch in, 1944 will see the greatest food production in our history.

But that will require your help.

It's up to you to: 1. grow every ounce of food you possibly can; 2. use all the food you grow; 3. can your food by the proper and safe methods.

Every ounce of home-canned food is urgently needed. Your Government begs you not only to match what you did last year, but if possible, to better your 1943 record.

Put up fruits and tomatoes by the boiling-water bath method—a safe and satisfactory method for these foods.

But before you begin your 1944 canning of all other vegetables, Good Housekeeping wants to tell you how to avoid a danger that may occur in home-canned food—a danger recognized by many authorities, including the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

That danger is botulinus food poisoning!

Botulinus poisoning comes from bacteria that live in the soil and cling to vegetables. It is rare—but it isn't confined to just a few parts of the country, as some people think.

Botulinus germs may be on the food you can. They must be destroyed. When ever these bacteria are present in the food and are not destroyed during the canning process, they gradually produce a toxin which is poisonous.

It takes hotter-than-boiling heat to kill botulinus germs. Neither hot-water bath nor open-kettle canning provides enough heat to destroy them. That is why we advise: the only safe way to can low-acid vegetables—which means all vegetables except tomatoes—is by the correct use of a pressure cooker!

If you don't already own a pressure cooker, you'll be glad to know that the Government is allowing the manufacture of 400,000 new cookers for sale this summer, without priorities.

If you can't buy a pressure cooker, borrow your neighbor's... or perhaps you'll find one available through a community canning group. If not, form your own community group, and buy one. To be safe, don't can low-acid vegetables any other way.

We take this opportunity to issue two further warnings: 1. Oven canning is dangerous. It has caused many serious accidents to persons and to property. Shun it! 2. All home-canned foods should be examined carefully when opened. If there is evidence of spoilage, the food should not be used. NEVER TASTE to discover spoilage.*

By all means, put up every ounce of surplus food you possibly can. Our armed forces and the hungry nations of the earth need the benefits of our abundance.

NORTH TO DANGER by TOM GILL

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

Hours passed. Snow flurries blustered past, and twice Colin moved back into the spruce for the solace of a smoke. Then, two hours before dawn, he heard the scrape of a toboggan and the steady patter of dogs' feet: Dove was going back to learn more.

The way was clear—hurrying to his dog team, Colin took up the northbound trail again. It was nearly eight when the sun rose—a lurid sun, almost obscured by clouds, and an hour later a fine, steady snow warned of worse things to come. Straight toward a distant point of spruce Dove's trail was leading, and caution told Colin to tie his dogs and reconnoiter.

But, even as he hesitated, his doubts were dispelled. Fully a mile ahead five timber wolves came down toward the lake in single file. Out upon the ice they trotted; then, turning, rounded the point of spruce and disappeared. Clearer than words their actions vouched for the absence of any human being. Calling to his lead dog, Colin pushed on. And soon the search ended.

The dogs, sniffling the trail, slackened pace and, stooping, Colin saw the unmistakable tracks of airplane skis. Farther on, a few drops of engine oil stained the ice.

The tracks told the story. Dove stopped beside the plane and fed logs, for a few pieces of white-lay scattered about. Colin picked up a fragment of freshly torn brown cardboard. A column of numbers was written there in pencil, and he saw that the figure 7 bore the small horizontal cross mark used by Europeans.

Colin's mind went back to that airplane map of the bay, with arrows pointing to the little crescent-shaped inlet. Up there, three hundred miles to the north, the trail was leading. Too far for any dog-team track.

Sunk deep in meditation, it was minutes before Colin raised his head to see that the long-expected blizzard had broken, and already the lake shore was blotted out in a swirling curtain of white. Pulling up the hood of his parka, he started his dog team south. None too soon.

In less than an hour the wind had risen to a howling gale, filling the world with snow so needle-fine that Colin could scarcely breathe. For a while, he rode the toboggan, but soon the cold forced him to run beside the team. The dogs were whining, weaving back and forth. Colin veered westward, hoping that in the lee of the timber the wind's force might be broken.

It was almost noon when he realized he must be far west of the trail, while the fury of the storm increased. He could scarcely see the lead dog.

Blind going now. He let the dogs drift farther west—easier to make for his own cabin than face that wind into Learmonth. Then suddenly he realized the dogs were following a vaguely familiar ridge trail that wound down to the shores of a tiny lake.

Head down, eyes almost shut, Colin followed the toboggan until suddenly the team stopped, and, laying his hand on the lead dog's head, Colin felt him shiver—in the same second he heard the long, quavering howl of a wolf. Then he understood. They were on the trail to Nate Tennant's cabin—he was farther west than he had thought.

Storm-beaten and weary, Colin remembered their quarrel the night before, while the dogs looked at him, whining. He knew they were hungry—hungry as himself—and the temptation to risk it grew.

Sooner or later he was meet Tennant, so why not

...if Tennant was not there, he could borrow some whitefish and rest his team under the unwritten law of the north—the never-failing offer of refuge in a storm. He turned his dogs toward Nate's cabin.

Tying them well back from the trail where they would not be close to Nate's wolf team, Colin patted the lead dog's head, "Food soon, old boy," and he knocked on the door. No answer, but the latch was up, and, shaking his shoulder against it, Colin entered, eyes half-frozen. As he closed the door, Nate Tennant stood watching him.

No sign of welcome on the big trapper's face; his eyes were cold as arctic ice, and in that moment Colin knew he should have gone on. Too late now. He could only make the best of it.

"I've got a team of tired, hungry dogs outside, Nate," he drew off his mitts. "Mind if I feed and rest them?"

"Your dogs are welcome—but not you!"

Colin made no move, but the taut muscles of his jaw showed how near Nate had come to the danger line. Worn out with his battle against the storm, weary with the past night's sleeplessness, Colin's own patience was rapidly thinning. Only a single word was needed—the merest spark.

But calmly, so calmly Colin wondered at the sound of his own voice, he answered, "All right, Nate. If that's the way it is, I'll go."

He turned, then stopped—Tennant had stepped between him and the door.

"You're not going anywhere." One hand closed on the fold of Colin's shirt, and roughly Tennant jerked him close. "I told you last night what would happen if I saw you again. I gave you fair warning to get out. Now they'll carry you out!"

Within Colin something snapped. At sight of Tennant's savage face thrust so close to him, and the feel of that hairy hand gripping his shirt, the memory of past provocations swept over him in a red wave.

"Nate"—the words came very slowly—"you're not man enough to drive me out of this country; you're not man enough to keep me away from Blair."

Ripping off his parka, Colin threw it behind him. "You've been asking for this fight all your life." For the space of a heartbeat the two men stood poised, while Colin was conscious of the roar of flames rising in the stovepipe and the solitary howl of a wolf outside.

In the next second, Tennant struck.

A vicious blow, driven with all the power of Nate's huge shoulder muscles, catching Colin high on the chest, sent him crashing back against the cabin wall. There he steadied himself.

Then a sweep of Tennant's hand, and a chair splintered in a far corner. He lowered his head and rushed at Nate.

In the center of the room they met. Flat-footed, flailing with both hands, making no effort to ward off the other's blows, they fought almost toe to toe.

Lighter by twenty pounds, Colin gave ground as Nate crowded him. Twice around the cabin they fought, Colin forced ever backward by the very bulk of his huge adversary. His lip was bleeding, and a blue-red welt stood upon his cheek, but he was beyond the reach of pain.

Savagely Colin lashed out and missed. A blow from Tennant caught him squarely on the jaw, and he fell, upsetting the table; then rose to his knees.

"Get up!" Nate towered over him. "Get up! I haven't even started."

Slowly Colin gathered himself, shaking his throbbing head to clear it, and through a blood-hued mist he heard Tennant laugh. Already triumph was lighting Nate's eyes. Anxious—too anxious—to get it over with, he lunged again, missed, and, losing balance, struck the stove. With a crash it overturned, scattering burning brands across the cabin, and the stovepipe clattered to the floor.

At that moment Colin was on him. A terrific blow drove Tennant's head back. Nate stumbled against the bunk, then, growling like a wounded bear, came out again, and once more Colin struck.

Out of the stove a thin tongue of flame began licking its red way across the floor until it reached the wall and, spreading fanlike, climbed swiftly upward, crackling through tinder-dry moss that chinked the logs.

Unheeding this blaze, the desperate battlers fought on. By now that spreading flame had gained the rafters, filling the place with smoke while the dogs and wolves raised a maddened, frantic chorus.

Then suddenly it was over. Out of the smoke Colin saw Nate's face loom and he struck with all his might. A spasm of pain darted through his hand; the face disappeared.

Guardedly, Colin took a step forward, and his foot touched Tennant's prostrate body. For a moment he swayed, then groped his way out the door. The cold touch of snow on his face brought sanity surging back; he saw smoke billowing from the cabin. Even as he watched, a spearhead of flame flared out of the open door; a window broke with a crash of glass.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

THE SIZE of the women's vote has nothing to do with it. Women got the vote in 1920 and they were completely entitled to it. There never was a sound argument as to their right to vote. The real argument was as to what they would do with the vote after they got it. In the days when the suffrage campaign was being waged, it was contended that if the women were given the vote they would purify politics, lift the politician to a higher plane and raise the standards of public life not only in the national Government but particularly in State and city administration.

IN THE 24 years since women began to vote (and in every one of those years the number who registered and voted has increased), not one of those things has happened. On the contrary it has been very firmly established that women do not vote as a sex or a class or group. In these 24 years, the League of Women Voters, which is the soundest and best of women's political organizations, has done a great deal to interest and educate women along political lines and to inspire their active interest and participation in politics. Nevertheless, it still remains true that the great bulk of women (and this includes those of the highest intelligence as well as the lowest) vote the way the male heads of their families do. If they have no husbands, they are influenced by uncles, or brothers, or lovers. Of course, there are many exceptions to this rule, but none the less it is the rule.

AND, IT is entirely natural. It does not argue any inability of women voters to think for themselves. It does not mean they are less intelligent or understanding than men. It is partly due to the instinctive tendency of the female to rely upon the male and partly to the habit of women, for generations, to regard politics and public affairs as the exclusive business of men. It will take a good many years still before they fully can overcome the instinct or break themselves of the habit. Maybe they never will.

AT ANY rate, though they are now in the clear majority and are holding more offices and getting a greater play from the politicians than before, they have not swung any elections yet. Nor will they swing this one. They will vote in this election as they voted before—to wit, largely as the men vote. No better illustration of this habit is to be found than in the Negro vote. When, in 1936, that vote was captured by Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt, the Negro woman went over with the Negro man. In that election and in 1940 they were for Mr. Roosevelt with equal solidity. If in this election, as seems indicated, that solidity is lessened, the proportion of loss between the male and female Negroes will be practically the same.

THERE JUST is no woman's vote. Not even on the so-called moral questions do women vote one way and men the other. There has not yet been found an issue upon which the sexes divide. After 24 years it is still correct to say that giving the women the vote has doubled the size of the electorate, more than doubled the cost of campaigns and elections, and greatly added to the bewilderment and confusion. But it hasn't changed anything else. That, however, is not the fault of women and in no way detracts from the fact that there was no sound reason for withholding the vote from them.

The local worker has numerous talents. In addition to his job of maintenance foreman at Kohm and Haas plant, he is a trained architect, he having a degree from Drexel Institute, Philadelphia.

It was during a tour of Europe after his eyesight began to fail, that he studied woodcarving.

Among his works are reproductions to minute scale of schooners, yachts, etc., for the ship owners, these being in his relief and used as wall plaques.

Mr. Stewart and his wife have travelled considerably. While in England some years ago Mr. Stewart studied the art of heraldry, which made a background for his preparation of coats of arms. Through this knowledge he traces family histories and creates coats of arms.

The Stewarts have published a number of children's books, Mrs. Stewart being the writer of the family, and her husband illustrating the stories. Mr. Stewart was for some time connected with a Philadelphia newspaper, doing editorial and general cartooning.

Red Army Legions Thunder Forward

or none in others. Some 2,500 Nazis were slain in the Bialystok region, while approximately 1,000 were taken prisoner at Lwow.

Strategically, perhaps, the most significant Soviet success was the capture of Siauliai, which is only 85 miles east of the Baltic seaport of Memel and 73 miles southwest of the Latvian capital of Riga. Only one major railroad escape route is left for an estimated 500,000 German troops in the Baltic states.

In Poland, the only remaining big base before Warsaw still in German hands is Brest-Litovsk, some 119 miles due east of the Polish capital, and that historic city is virtually encircled and doomed.

The other enemy strongholds did not fall without some savage and bloody fighting, which cost Russian as well as German lives.

Gen. Andrei I. Yeremenko's forces, which occupied Daugavpils

and Rezekne, had to battle their way through trenches, anti-tank ditches, "dragon's teeth" defenses and barbed wire entanglements surrounding Daugavpils, routing three German infantry divisions, two S. S. regiments and a police regiment.

Soviet tanks and infantry swept beyond the city to sever the Daugavpils-Riga railway and reached the western Dvina river.

On the first Baltic front, Gen. Ivan C. Bagration's troops advanced 43 miles to cut the Siauliai-Riga railway and highway and all roads to Tilsit, East Prussia. Russian infantrymen, moving forward behind mobile formations, annihilated the German garrisons in the large inhabited localities of Radzivilskis, Saplazi and Kaite. They broke into Siauliai itself from three sides, wiped out some 2,000 Nazis and captured large quantities of supplies and equipment. More than 400 enemy troops were taken prisoners.

Gen. M. V. Zakharov's Second White Russian Army was forced to overcome the Nazi defenders of Bialystok, some 100 miles northeast of Warsaw, in fierce street fighting as the enemy threw in strong tank and infantry forces in a desperate effort to save the city.

Remnants of the routed Nazi forces retreated over the Suprasl and Narva Rivers, where they were mercilessly bombed by Russian planes. Approximately 2,500 Germans were slain in the Bialystok debacle and Russian troops seized many tanks, guns, motor vehicles, locomotives and railway cars, as well as large stores of ammunition, provisions and military goods.

Marshal Ivan S. Konev's first Ukrainian Army completed the liquidation of Nazi forces that had garrisoned the encircled southeastern Polish rail junction city of Lwow. In one sector alone they burned or disabled 40 enemy tanks, captured 70 guns and took more than 1,000 prisoners.

In the Carpathian foothills, the southern wing of Konev's army surrounded the oil city of Stanislawow, described by Marshal Stalin as a regional center of the Ukraine and a "large railroad junction and important strong point of the German defenses. Russian columns entered the city from the northeast after cutting the last escape highway.

Other Russian forces driving toward Warsaw were reported fighting in the streets of Siedlce, 50 miles southeast of the embattled Polish capital.

On Wednesday, the Soviet com-

muniqué disclosed, 131 German tanks were destroyed and 42 planes shot down.

Americans Continue Major Attacks

London.—The American First Army is continuing major attacks on both sides of St. Lo, the German High Command said today. A high command communique admitted that the German lines below St. Lo had been withdrawn.

"While they (the Americans) only achieved unimportant breakthrough east of St. Lo," the communique said, "our troops were withdrawn farther to the south and southwest of the town in fierce fighting which caused heavy losses on both sides."

"Counterattacks to close the gaps in our front line at several points are going on. Seventy-five tanks were destroyed. In the Caen sector, the enemy only carried out unsuccessful attacks of small significance."

Today's Quiet Moment By the Rev. Arthur D. Sargis Pastor Eddington Presbyterian Church Eddington

Almighty God, Thou art always thinking of us: all things are for our sake. Thy providence shows us that Thou dost love us. Thy redemption shows us how much Thou dost love us. May we not only love Thee but may we love Thee with our whole being. May the Cross be the symbol not only of our objective faith but also the symbol of our Christian experience. We come to the Cross of Christ because it leads us to Thee and Thou art our goal this day and for evermore. Lead on, O Christ of God, and we will follow Thee. We pray in Jesus' Name. Amen.

MOTHERS: THE FLETCHER'S CASTORIA NOW ON SALE IS SAFEGUARDED THREE WAYS!

Look for the Serial Control Number on each bottle

EVERY BOTTLE of Fletcher's Castoria—now on sale at your drugist's—bears a Serial Control Number.

This number is plainly visible through a "window" in the new package. It is your guarantee that Fletcher's Castoria is safeguarded by three different kinds of rigid tests... chemical, bacteriological, and biological.

Here's how you can easily identify the new package:

The Green Band... Around each package is a brilliant green band. This band quickly identifies the triple-tested Fletcher's Castoria now on sale.

The Serial Control Number... The Serial Control Number is on the bottle label. You can see it through a "window" in the outside carton.

We think that this visible evidence of quality and reliability... the Serial

Control Number on each bottle... will be welcomed by millions of mothers who have long used Fletcher's Castoria as the ideal laxative for children.

And we think that millions of mothers will be glad to know that Fletcher's Castoria—the laxative made especially for children—is now on sale at their drugists'.

For this is the original and genuine Fletcher's Castoria... the laxative that's mild and gentle, yet effective... the laxative that's pleasant-tasting, so you don't have to "force" your child to take it.

Ask for Fletcher's Castoria the next time your child needs a laxative.

Note: Until sufficient stocks can be made available, your drugist may not have enough Fletcher's Castoria on hand to meet all demands. If he happens to be out of stock when you ask for Fletcher's Castoria, please be patient. He will have it for you shortly.

VOLTZ NINE GOES INTO 1ST PLACE OF SUBURBAN CIRCUIT

Gasoleers Defeat Diamond Boys by Score of 7 to 5

BLACK ON THE MOUND

Veteran Pitcher Was Able To Breeze Speed Ball Past The Diamond Batters

EDGELEY, July 28.—The Voltz-Texaco team went into first place in the Bristol Suburban League last evening as it beat the Diamond nine, 5-2, on the Edgely field.

The Diamond boys outbatted the winners, 7-5, but in the pinches the veteran Howard Black breezed his speed ball past the Diamond batters. Nine of the Diamond players went down on strikes and two received passes.

Of the seven hits made by the Diamond team, four were doubles with "Eddie" DeKoyor having a pair and Woolvin and Keyes getting the others.

MUNROE TO PITCH FOR ROHM & HAAS TONIGHT

Manager Ken Munroe who at one time pitched for the Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League will attempt to hurl his Rohm and Haas team to victory tonight when the nine clashes with the Fleetwings team in a Trenton Industrial League game on the Maple Beach diamond.

The chemical mixers have also been strengthened by the acquisition of several players from Jersey and all indications point to a close affair.

ings of a Pole, a fighting Frenchman, a Czech, an R. A. F. pilot and a parachute trooper, but at the time the article was published he had not as yet run across a typical American soldier he might paint. Mr. Bowler, whose portrait of Cordell Hull hangs in the State Department in Washington, D. C., was holding a one-man show in New York in December, 1941, and although he was over-age at the time of the Pearl Harbor incident, he volunteered for the camouflage corps and attained the rank of Technical Sergeant.

It was because Bowler found the service catered to the men's physical well-being, but did little to encourage them culturally, that he began to wonder what could be done in this direction.

Returning from a march one day, Bowler kicked off his shoes, liked the pattern they made on the floor and painted them, calling the picture "After the Hike."

This painting won first prize in the first art exhibition he organized for service men at Mitchell Field.

Since that time Mr. Bowler has been selected by the American Red Cross to serve as director of arts and handwork.

the Delaware river. These horses, all of which are unbroken, were shipped by Paul K. Fisher two weeks ago, and got away when 38 stamped.

The last round-up will be held Sunday at White's Mill section, where most of the 13 are believed to be pasturing. No round-up was held last Sunday because Mr. Fisher was celebrating his 45th birthday anniversary at Carlisle, Pa., and did not get back in time. But in spite of that, two more of the 15 that had been on the loose from the previous Sunday's round-up, were captured.

FORMER U. OF PENN. PITCHER HOLDS THE ARROWS TO 5 HITS

Eastern Aircraft Defeats Arrows by Score of 13 to 0

EVERY HIT A SINGLE

De Risi Went to Pieces in Fifth and Trenton Nine Went on Scoring Spree

TRENTON, July 28.—"Ed" Warwick, formerly of Penn University, held the Fleetwings team to five hits last evening on Wetzel field, as he pitched the Eastern Aircraft nine to a 13-0 triumph over the Wingers.

Warwick's fast ball was too much for the Fleetwings batters as he set them down inning after inning. The five hits made by the losers were all singles and Holcomb had two out of four to lead the batters.

"Mike" DeRisi started on the mound for the Arrows and pitched brilliant ball for four innings during which stretch he held the Eastern Aircraft team hitless and had allowed but one batter to reach first on a walk. But Fleetwings and DeRisi went to pieces in the fifth when an error by Walker started the Eastern team on a scoring spree and before the frame was over eight runs had crossed.

Heister relieved DeRisi and finished although the Trenton boys added two more with a walk, an error, and two hits in the sixth and finished with another in the seventh.

escape route, drove to within five miles of the city on both the north and the south.

The German radio announced that the fighting in Normandy had risen to new heights and declared that Allied commanders now had concentrated 2,000 to 4,000 tanks "for the coming clash on the St. Lo-Coutanges road."

"In the western sector Allied forces have maintained their rapid advances," Communiqué No. 105 from headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower said concerning the American drive.

The twin offensive southwest-

ward from the St. Lo area was accompanied by forward advances all along the American-held front from Lessay, on the western sea coast, to the vicinity of Caumont, at the center of the Anglo-American battle line.

While one formation advanced south of occupied Periers, other units gained ground west of Caumont.

Lessay, on the coast, was taken almost simultaneously with the occupation of Periers. Both points and the towns surrounding them and in between were heavily mined and numerous booby traps had been placed in the area by the Germans who began to withdraw to the south in an effort to escape being trapped in the coastal area.
